

I am concerned that the new broadcast service, LPFM, will take priority over FM translators. I currently listen to a national station, K-LOVE, over a translator and it would be a HUGE disservice to the Denver Community if this station was no longer available. I am able to obtain all the local information I need, while I enjoy hearing from callers from all parts of the US. This station is the only station I can hear locally that provides the type of music my family enjoys in a commercial-free setting. There are so few stations providing positive music with an encouraging message, it would be tragic if this station were to be removed in lieu of yet another local station with the same traffic and sports reports I could get from countless other local stations. I believe that national stations such as K-Love definitely serve the public interest in ways that local stations cannot. Additionally, this station provides outreach services to the Denver community, and allows local charities to publicize events for free, such as Thanksgiving food drives for the Denver Rescue Mission. Please do not allow LPFM service to take priority over translators. There are more local choices now than we need.
